

So I don't want to put my Minister out with outdated messaging that really can't be embargoed.

Cecely

The messaging would change?

I'm just concerned this will lead to further confusion

C

To not have lead Minister on it

Not really, it's that the details will now be available so we can disclose what is actually going to happen. So if there is a clip of Lametti saying to Evan for example that the orders will come soon with explicit details after they've been already published it would look bad. For both the show and the Minister.
